

THE PAN-AMERICAN GAMES

Although the Pan-American Games have not previously received much recognition in the United States, more extensive coverage by the media of this year's Games in Caracas should increase the public's awareness of this quadrennial event. Competition is held in virtually all Olympic events as well as in several sports such as baseball and tennis that are not yet Olympic sports.

Some of the best world class boxers have competed in the Pan-American Games yet there has been only one professional world champion who was also a Pan-Am champion. Among the world's champions who competed in the Pan-Am Games have been: Raul Macias, Bob Foster, Esteban DeJesus, Miguel DeOliveira, Victor Galindez, Aaron Pryor, Ray Leonard, Leon Spinks and Michael Dokes. Of these men, only Leonard was successful in the Pan-Am Games - winning the 139 pound class in 1975.

While the United States and Cuba have dominated the competition in recent years, in the first Games held in Buenos Aires in 1951 all eight boxing titles were won by Argentines. Unlike the first Olympic Games to have boxing competition, the 1904 St. Louis Games (where the United States swept all the boxing titles because there were no foreign entrants), the 1951 Pan-American Games had boxers from 11 countries.

Since 1955 ten weight classes have been contested as in the Olympics. The only three time individual winner has been the Cuban light middleweight Rolando Garbey who won in 1967, 1971 and 1975. Teofilo Stevenson can equal that record by winning in 1983. Stevenson was defeated in the semi-final round in 1971 by Duane Bobick but has since won in 1975 and 1979.

Oscar Bonavena holds one of the more unusual Pan-Am records. He lost his first bout in 1963 by disqualification for biting his opponent. A consolation bout between semi-final losers was held to determine third and fourth place and Bonavena also lost that one by disqualification.

The accompanying detailed results are the first published collection to the best of my knowledge. Reports of the Games have been sketchy and the United States Amateur Boxing Federation's records are also. Even the newspaper accounts have been quite limited in their coverage.
